In Crawdaddy Shoots North Carolina By Car, author John Kennedy recounts his epic road trip from New Orleans to the Outer Banks. Along the way, he encounters a cast of colorful characters, visits historic landmarks, and savors the flavors of the American South.

Kennedy's writing is both lyrical and informative, and he has a keen eye for detail. He brings the people and places he encounters to life, and he offers a unique perspective on the American South. Crawdaddy Shoots North Carolina By Car is a must-read for anyone who loves road trips, travelogues, or simply good writing.

A Road Trip Adventure for the Ages

Kennedy's road trip begins in New Orleans, a city known for its vibrant culture and delicious food. He spends a few days exploring the city, visiting the French Quarter, eating at some of the best restaurants in town, and listening to live music. From New Orleans, Kennedy heads east on Interstate 10, passing through the swamps of Louisiana and the pine forests of Mississippi. He stops in Mobile, Alabama, to visit the USS Alabama battleship, and in Montgomery, Alabama, to visit the Rosa Parks Museum.

From Montgomery, Kennedy continues east on Interstate 85, passing through the rolling hills of Georgia and the Blue Ridge Mountains of North Carolina. He stops in Atlanta, Georgia, to visit the Martin Luther King Jr. National Historic Site, and in Asheville, North Carolina, to visit the Biltmore Estate. From Asheville, Kennedy drives east to the Outer Banks, a chain of barrier islands off the coast of North Carolina. He spends a few days exploring the Outer Banks, visiting the Wright Brothers National Memorial and the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse.

A Cast of Colorful Characters

Along the way, Kennedy meets a cast of colorful characters. He meets a Cajun chef who teaches him how to make gumbo, a blues musician who plays him a few songs, and a Vietnam veteran who tells him stories about his time in the war. Kennedy also meets a group of college students who are on a road trip of their own, and he spends a few days traveling with them.

Historic Landmarks

Kennedy also visits a number of historic landmarks on his road trip. He visits the USS Alabama battleship in Mobile, Alabama, the Rosa Parks Museum in Montgomery, Alabama, and the Martin Luther King Jr. National Historic Site in Atlanta, Georgia. He also visits the Biltmore Estate in Asheville, North Carolina, and the Wright Brothers National Memorial and the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse on the Outer Banks.

The Flavors of the American South

Kennedy savors the flavors of the American South on his road trip. He eats gumbo in New Orleans, fried chicken in Mississippi, barbecue in Georgia, and seafood on the Outer Banks. He also visits a number of local breweries and wineries, and he samples some of the best craft beer and wine that the South has to offer.
