Led by the brilliant and charismatic Commander Sarah Jones, the crew includes the best and brightest minds in the field. But what begins as a mission of hope and discovery quickly turns into a nightmare.

As the crew explores the Martian surface, they make a series of missteps that have devastating consequences. They underestimate the harshness of the environment, they make mistakes in their equipment, and they fail to anticipate the dangers that lurk in the shadows. One by one, the astronauts begin to die, and it becomes clear that their mission is doomed.

But even as the crew faces its own mortality, they refuse to give up. They fight to survive, to complete their mission, and to make it back to Earth alive. But the odds are stacked against them, and the cost of their ambition may be greater than they ever imagined.
